EBBETS FIELD, BROOKLYN, N. Y., Oct. 10.—The Dodgers did it. After being beaten in two straight games by one run margin, they passed the compliment to the Red Sox Tuesday afternoon and won the third game of the world's series by a score of 4 to 3. The Dodgers kept going from start to finish. There was not a single bobbie in the infield or outfield. For six innings Veteran Jack Coombs pitched sterling ball for Brooklyn and though he was relieved by Pfeffer in the seventh, credit for the victory goes to Coombs. Behind his pitching and that of Pfeffer in the last two innings the Dodgers put over their victory by straight out and out clouting, mixed with a carefully played sacrifice game and clean fielding on defense.

Snappy Weather
The weather man stepped in as a pinch hitter in the world's series Tuesday afternoon. If any additional pep were needed in the big tussle after yesterday's record game, it was injected by zippy, snappy brand of weather. The sun was shining brightly but there was a distinct snap in the air that threw all kinds of ginger into fans and players and at the same time was not uncomfortable.

President Charles Ebbets had made great preparations for the reception of the two teams. Around the wall fluttered myriad gay flags, one apparently of every holiday in the Ebbets almanac. In the left field, usually given over to the scoreboard, temporary bleachers had been built and the crowd had no trouble at all in hiding the scoreboards.

The Boston Royal Rooters, red-coated band and all, headed into the park early, with the band busting away at "Tessie" as they marched from the centerfield gate to their seats. The grandstand filled slowly but the fans gave Boston a lesson in "pep." Myers, hero of yesterday's record struggle, was given a great hand as the Brooklyn club took the diamond for practice. When a band in front of the grandstand played popular airs, the spectators joined in at times.

Apparently in anticipation of more left-hand pitching, or realizing the sudden weakness of Daubert, Fred Merkle worked out at first base for the Dodgers.

Carl Mays and Dutch Leonard stepped from the Boston bench and began to warm up. On the other side Jack Coombs tried out his arm. At 1:50 it looked like a capacity crowd, approximately thirty thousand.

Game, willing and fighting all the time, the Dodgers can to date number themselves among their worst enemies. They have fought Boston to a standstill and then beaten them by the odds and then beaten them by the odds and then beaten them by the odds. A wobbly in the infield, a piece of bad base running or a slip in pitching and a 'chance' has flown. They have lost two games by a margin of one run and in both struggles they went down with their flag flapping at the mast and their nerve unbroken right up to the last gasp.

But it was a new deal of baseball Tuesday. Not even a pinch of cold has caused the rubber plants of the sacred precinct to wilt, let alone the mere matter of a couple of wallpops for the home club.

The Dodgers have shown their middle name is fight. The Red Sox were out to make it four straight games and wind up the series tonight Wednesday. If they don't they will have to scramble their way over the shattered remains of a baseball aggregation that must be scattered over several blocks before admitting it is licked.

A cold wind swept Flatbush and zipped around Ebbets field early in the day presaging a shivery opening for the second leg of the series. The sun was shining brightly, however.

Interest in the series is now at fever heat. A crowd of hundreds of fans thronged Grand Central station Monday night to greet the battling teams. The Dodgers and Red Sox alike were given a rousing reception.

Dutch Leonard is practically certain to draw the Boston assignment for slab duty in an effort to bring the Dodgers to the proverbial "last ditch" stage. Uncle Wilbert Robinson crossed everybody so completely MADISON, Wis., Oct. 10.—Main hall at the University of Wisconsin is in ruins. A smoldering fire was discovered under the dome at 10:15 a. m. Tuesday and within an hour the massive dome had crumbled and fallen.

Main hall is valued at $202,000. At 11:30 Fire Chief Heyl said the hall was practically ruined. The building is insured in the state fire insurance fund for $184,000. The contents are valued at $26,000.

Fifteen hundred students were in the building when the fire was discovered. They got out in orderly fashion. There were no mishaps. But there were miraculous escapes.

As soon as the fire was discovered 100 students scaled the roof of the hall to fight the blaze. Fire lines were quickly thrown out and five thousand people were at the fire within twenty minutes.

The original structure was built under an appropriation of $45,000 made by the legislature in 1857. Since then two wings have been added.

President Van Hise of the university, said: "The fire apparently started in the literary society room or in the dome. An alarm was immediately turned in and the equipment here in the building was manned by the force of janitors, augmented by students. We are particularly proud of the way the thousands of students in the building conducted themselves. There was no disorder of any kind and nothing resembling panic. We had planned against such a calamity and had routine fire drill that worked perfectly. I do not know how long it took them to get out. Last year when we tried it, they got out in two minutes. As far as damage is concerned, of course, I am unable to say at the present time. I hope it will not be large. We are doing everything we can do."

RICE BOUND TO CIRCUIT COURT

S. E. Rice, charged with embezzling a large sum from J. W. Boyer and with obtaining an automobile from Myron Savage by misrepresentation, on Tuesday waived examination in county court and was bound over to circuit court. His bonds were placed at $3,000 for the two counts.

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 10.—(Special.)—Members of the 1915 session of the Wisconsin legislature came trooping into the city this morning for the special session of the legislature which is to convene this afternoon at 2 o'clock. It is not expected that there will be any delay in completing the work for which the session is called—the enactment of a law to permit soldiers on the bor-

Bosshard's Last Session
The extra session of the Badger legislature marks the passing from that body of Senator Otto Bosshard, noted progressive leader, who has dominated the La Follette wing of the state representatives for the last two regular sessions. Senator Bosshard, who later withdrew from the race in the interest of Senator William H. Hatton, was the progressive candidate for governor in the early primary campaign, and E. F. Clark of Galesville, succeeded him as the republican nominee for the seat of the Thirty-second district. Senator Bosshard left for Madison Tuesday morning.

to vote by mail. It is also planned to make the law broad enough so that the students of the University of Wisconsin, who have been disfranchised from voting in Madison, by the recent decision of the Wisconsin supreme court, may cast ballots in their home cities.

Speaker Whitte announced last night a tentative program as to how the legislature is to be re-organized. There will be a resolution put through as soon as both houses are organized for a committee of both houses to wait upon the governor and notify him that the houses are in session and ready to do business. This action will be preceded by the reading of the call in each house giving the reason for the calling of the special session.

All provisions in the rules of both houses requiring a lapse of time before the bills can be considered will be suspended, according to Speaker Whitte. No standing committees will be appointed. The legislation will be considered by each house acting as a committee of the whole.

It was expected early today that the governor would appear in person before both houses late this afternoon and that his short message, which was being prepared early today would then be read by the executive. It is predicted by those who are back of affairs that the special session will have concluded its work by Wednesday night.

The bill to be introduced provides for the balloting of the soldiers by a

Soldier Appeals To Tribune to Get Troops Home

A postal card received by The TRIBUNE from a La Crosse soldier boy which evidently escaped the hawk-eyed censors of General Funston, may have some bearing on the feeling of La Crosse men in San Antonio who have families dependent upon them at home.
On the address side the card says: "We are needed home." It is not signed.
The brief note it contains follows:
"San Antonio, Tex.
"La Crosse Tribune,
"Gentlemen:
"Please try and see what you can do to get us out of here. Why are we here, and why are other troops going home before we do, if we are here first?
"And why do we have to do most of the work? We want to go and get to La Crosse, so see what you can do."

DOUGLAS NOT FOR WINTER

State Officials Disapprove of Bringing Men Back After
Nov. 15; Winter Work
Mapped Out

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Oct. 10.—(Special.)—Chances of the return of the Wisconsin Brigade from the border are believed to be practically nil by officers and men of the Badger troops, following the receipt of orders to draw overcoats, extra blankets and straw ticks. In these orders, the soldiers see plain indications that their stay is to be over the winter.

Moreover, winter quarters are being built for the machine gun mules and other animals of the Wisconsin contingent. Apparently Uncle Sam will keep the men on the border. Officers also declare that the drill schedule as now outlined indicates a full winter's work.

Douglas Not Winter Camp
A member of the division staff is quoted as saying Wisconsin will be here two months more, and if this is the case, it is believed certain that the stay will be lengthened until spring. Wisconsin officials are known to disapprove return of the troops after November 15, since Camp Douglas, where the men would have to be quartered for at least a few days, until muster-out could be finished, has no facilities for handling troops in winter.

Further evidence that the troops from Wisconsin are not to be sent home is furnished by a list recently published by the headquarters of the southern departments of the army, giving the commands which are scheduled to be sent home and replaced by other units now in mobilization camps. Wisconsin is not on the list. The announcement was also made that the Twelfth Division, of which the Wisconsin regiments are a part, is to be kept intact.

No Company Shifts
Company M promoted two of its men Friday. Corporal Irvin Sheldon was promoted the Sergeant to fill Sergeant Caar's place. Sergeant Caar was recently discharged under the married men's act. Private Elliot was advanced to Sheldon's former rank.

All the men in the Wisconsin brigade were given a chance to transfer to the motor truck companies, as truck drivers. The drivers receive $36.00 a month but must enlist for three years' service.

The companies have been issued new stakes for the tents and the men have reset their "homes." Some of the men have put floors in their tents and have made tables and chairs out of old boxes, expecting to remain all the winter in the south.

Baldy Grows Up
Company M's mascot "Baldy" has grown into a large buckler during the absence of the troops on the Austin hike. The men have to be careful of their laundry now as "Baldy" is very fond of clothes, especially newly laundered shirts and socks.

Troops Return
CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Troop A, Wisconsin cavalry, reached here at 9:15 a. m. and left shortly afterward on the Northwestern for Camp Douglas. The train should reach there about 6 p. m. Tuesday, railroad officials said. The train will not pass through Milwaukee, but will take the direct route to Camp Douglas.

Meetings of State
Body

Delighted as they are over the unexpectedly large attendance at the state convention which opened Monday evening, authorities of the First Baptist church are a bit rueful at the partial wreck of their carefully laid plans for the entertainment of all the delegates and visitors. It had been planned that church folk of the host-church and other denominations would entertain all of the arrivals. Accommodations for something over 200 were arranged, it being estimated that the extreme distance of the La Crosse from some of the churches in the eastern and southern parts of the state would cut down the attendance perceptibly. By noon today all of the quarters which had been volunteered were filled, and the reception committee was forced to direct late comers to the hotels.

Big Attendance Record
More than 150 out-of-town delegates and visitors were present for the opening session Monday evening, a figure which is believed to approximate a record. By noon today, it was estimated that close to 300 persons had arrived. All sessions of the convention are largely attended, owing to unexpected interest which is being taken by the townspeople in the subjects discussed.

Main sessions of the convention Tuesday were held in the Baptist church on Sixth street, but departmental conferences were scattered in nearby churches. Practically all of the down-town churches have donated their quarters for the convention. One session of the school of methods was held in the Presbyterian church Tuesday morning, and the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary society, a separate convention affiliated with the larger meeting, took place at the Methodist church. The entire convention Tuesday evening was to be shifted to the Congregational church, where a missionary playlet by a cast of Baptist young folks of La Crosse will be given at 7:30, and an important address by Franklin W. Sweet of Minneapolis, will be given. Mr. Sweet is to talk on "America Among the Nations," a discussion of international relations in the light of religion.

Many in Primary Section
The primary session attracted largest attendance of the school of methods period Tuesday morning. Miss Edith M. Town, Fond du Lac, a young woman of statewide note in Sunday school work, took up cradle roll and beginners' methods, outlining a plan for a state clearing house of suggestions and methods for the former department. Wednesday morning an even more interesting session of

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Returning from Berlin aboard the liner Frederick VIII, Ambassador James W. Gerard refused Tuesday to answer any question relating to the purpose of his visit to America at this time, saying that even the simplest question "might involve" him.

"Is it true that you are bringing a peace message from the kaiser to President Wilson?" he was asked. "I cannot answer that question," replied Gerard. "To reply to any question of that nature might involve me."

The ambassador's attention was called to an article wirelessly from the Frederick VIII to a New York paper, declaring positively that he brought no peace message, but came to warn President Wilson that Germany was preparing to resume indiscriminate submarine warfare. He was asked if this was a correct statement.

"I cannot answer that," he replied. "To answer even the simplest question might involve me. I have given no interview since I left Berlin. You will note that in this article I am not quoted."

"It has been reported that you will not go back to Germany," one reporter told him.

"I am not sure when I will go back, but I certainly shall go back," was his reply.

Trip a Vacation
LONG BRANCH, N. J., Oct. 10.—Ambassador Gerard, who arrived in New York Tuesday morning, bears no message from Kaiser Wilhelm to President Wilson suggesting American intervention on behalf of peace.

Nor does he come for the special purpose of discussing with the president reported revival of the submarine menace. It may be stated positively Gerard's trip to this country is made entirely at the suggestion of Secretary of State Lansing, in order to give the American ambassador "a much needed vacation."

There is no doubt, of course, that the president will want to know all developments both regarding the possibilities of peace in the near future and regarding any preparations which

Off the Nantucket
Light

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Belief that only five ships were sunk in the German submarine raid off Nantucket grew in shipping circles here Tuesday, as vague and contradictory reports concerning the crew of the steamer Kingston were received.

Thirty-six hours having elapsed since the Kingston was supposed to have been sunk, without any trace of her crew, steamship men were inclined to believe the name of the vessel may have been misread by the wireless operators, and that no such vessel as the Kingston was attacked.

Garbled "Knudson"

Within the last twelve hours an argument has arisen as to whether the name of the ship supposed to have been sunk was the Kingston or Kingstonsian. Captain E. L. Yates of the Uruguayan steamer P. L. M. No. 4, which rescued the crew of the British steamer Strathdene, said he believed the name of the Christian Knudson had been misread "Kingston" in some way when reports were transmitted by wireless.

It was also pointed out that all of the steamers were sunk within a comparatively small radius. The crews of the five ships known to have gone down were easily and speedily found by United States destroyers. In view of the care the German submarine was evidently taking to conform to all requirements of international law in giving the crews ample time to take to their small boats, it is also pointed out that it hardly seems reasonable that the crew of one ship could possibly be overlooked by the rescue warships.

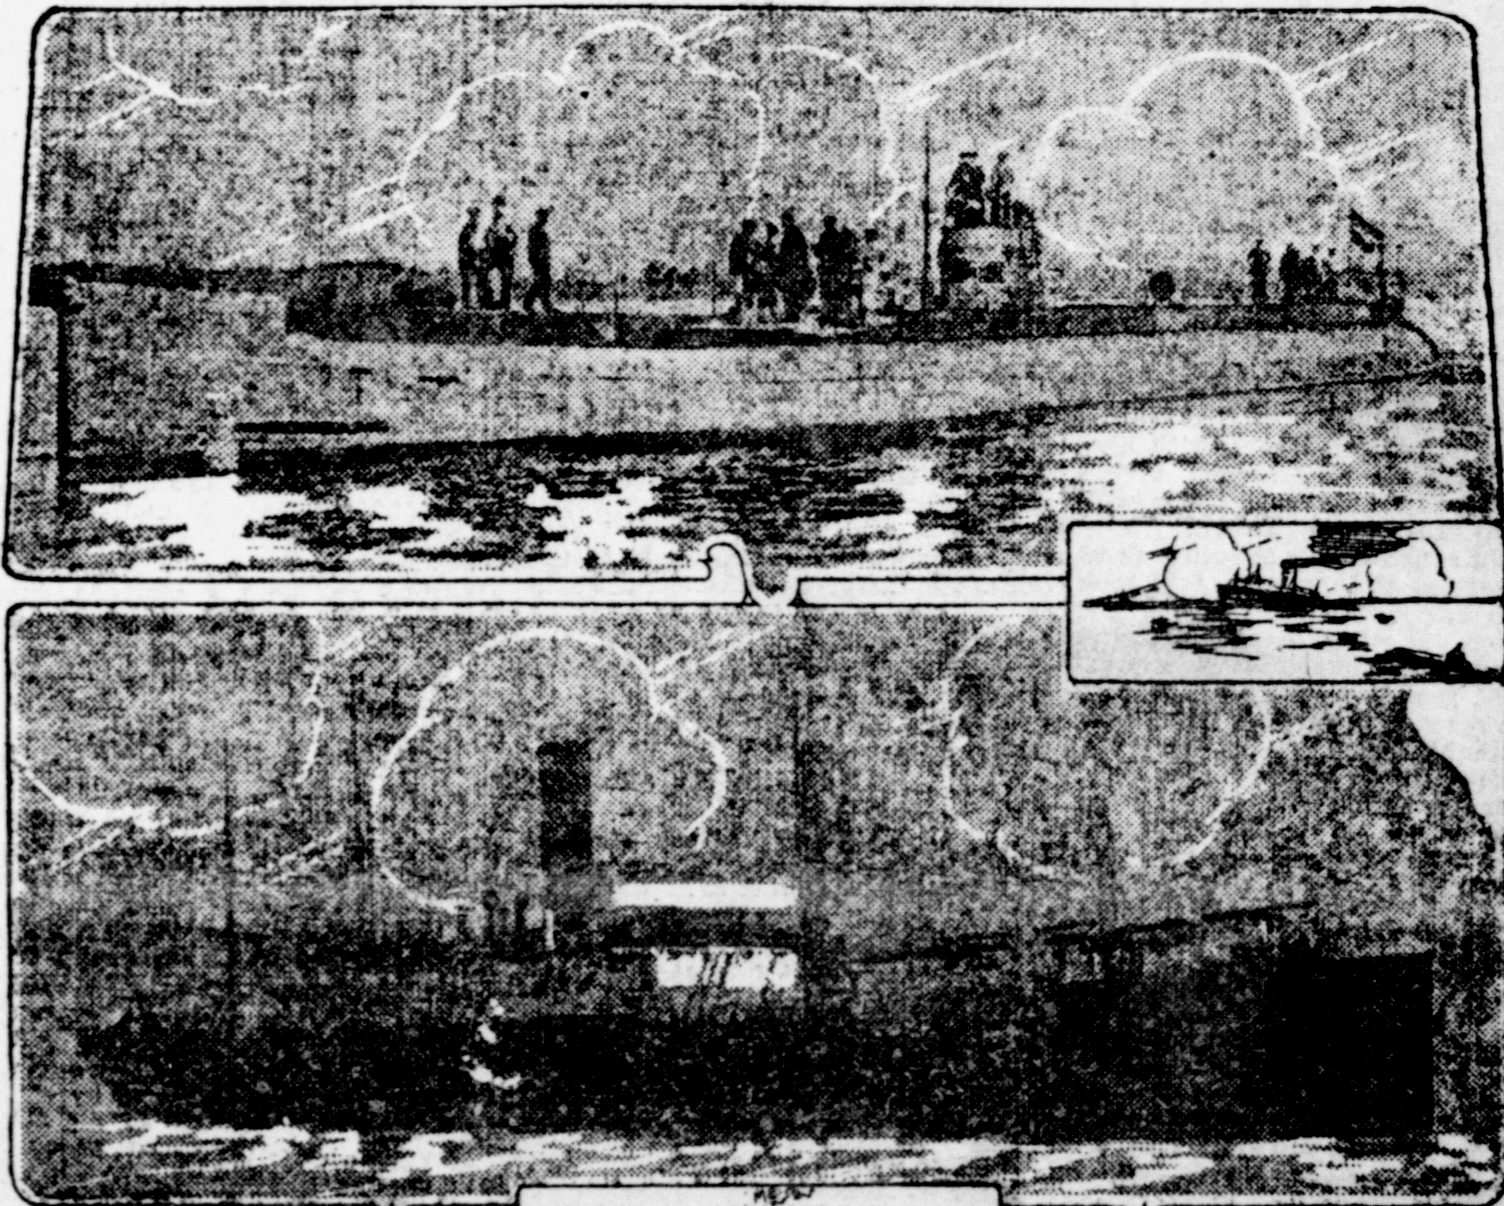

Blame Wireless Error

Seventeen destroyers were in the waters off Nantucket at one time and if a ship named the Kingston was sunk, some trace of her crew or wreckage of some sort would surely have been found.

To further bear out the theory that the reporting of the Kingston is most likely an error, it was pointed out, that three additional ships were reported as sunk in wireless messages to all New England points early

The operations of the German submarine U-53 has brought the European war to the very doors of the United States. Terror has seized shipping circles from Maine to Florida. Capt. Hans Ross, who brought the armed submarine across the At-

If still other submarines of this character are brought to this side of the Atlantic it is believed that great interference to the shipment of munitions will result.
The British steamer Strathdene was one of the U-53's victims.

Let It Stop Your Figure Mistake Losses

AN error made when you add up a cash sale while the customer is waiting, or an error that escapes detection on a charge sale slip are losses that can never be recovered.

If the mistake is in your favor, the customer resents the over-charge and is likely to quit trading with you. If the error is an under-charge the customer will be most unlikely to say anything about it. So in either case you are the loser.

You need this Burroughs to protect your profits—to stop your figure mistake losses. Your customers will recognize it as a service—it will create their good will and help you in building up your business.

You Can Use It On The Counter

The TRIBUNE'S Daily Short Story

A FRANK OPTION

By Arthur Wallace Peach

(Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Park Haydon was depressed in spirits. He had spent a lonely evening in the city and was on his way to the suburb where he roomed. The car was the last one for the night, and it contained only two passengers besides himself—a girl and a flashily dressed young fellow.

The girl was slender in figure, small and pretty of face and dark of hair. She seemed to be of the kind of under some kind of strain.

But Haydon's thoughts rested with his fellow passengers only a brief time. He was thinking that something was wrong with him. For four years he had worked as a clerk in the office of the firm without a raise of salary. He had made few friends—and not a girl had ever smiled upon him. To a lonely chap a friendly, girlish smile means a great deal, and Haydon knew it.

His chief trouble was that he did not know what was wrong with him. He was square and honest in his dealings, worked hard and was willing to do others a good turn.

A light touch on his shoulder drew his attention, and he turned to look into the oval-shaped face of the girl passenger. It was a girlish face, and on it was an anxious, worried expression that gave a touch of pathos to her dark eyes. She sank into the seat with him, and spoke hurriedly, her white throat quivering as she spoke and a little color showing in her cheeks.

"Please don't think me forward, but that man there has been following me, I think. I've seen him a few times before. I live in this section and I have quite a way to walk through a dark street. I'm afraid he may get off and follow me. Will

An Unfailing Way To Banish Hairs

(Beauty Notes)

Ugly hairy growths can be removed in the privacy of your own home if you get a small original package of delatone and mix into a paste enough of the powder and water to cover the hairy surface. This should be left on the skin about 2 minutes, then removed and the skin washed and every trace of hair will have vanished. No harm or inconvenience can result from this treatment, but be sure you buy real delatone.

you help me? I—I—really don't know what to do. I don't see how the conductor can help me. Can you tell me what to do?"

Haydon was dazed for more than a moment. No girl ever had spoken to him other than in the course of business, and here was a pretty, frightened girl asking his aid. He looked ahead at the man to whom she had referred. He was broad shouldered and the shoulders suggested strength. Haydon recalls stories he had heard. Something desperate might be done if such a man were opposed.

The girl was waiting. "Please don't think I am too easily frightened," she went on hastily. "He may not bother me, but I can't go on any further to the town, for I know no one there."

In her state of mind, her words were not entirely clear, but Haydon gathered their import. He looked again at the shoulders, and saw a keen, sallow face glance back and then turn quickly away. A shiver went through him. There was something cold and sinister in his face.

Haydon moved his feet uneasily. "I don't know," he answered hesitatingly. "I don't believe he will hurt you." He stopped because he realized how cowardly and inane his words seemed.

The girl's sensitive face flushed quickly. He saw that she looked at him with contempt. Without a word she went to her seat.

The car sped on. At last, the girl's hand was raised as a signal to stop. As she did so, the other man roused himself and repeated the signal.

With a white face, the girl rose and staggered down the aisle to the door, and after her the man whom she feared. After they had alighted and the car had moved away, the conductor, a slight, gaunt-faced youth, came up to Haydon.

"What was the matter with the girl?" he asked.

Haydon told him. The lean jaw dropped, and the young fellow stared at Haydon. "Why didn't you go with her?" he demanded.

"Why should I butt in?" was the half-hearted reply.

The conductor turned with an oath of disgust. "I know what the trouble is with you—you're a blamed coward!"

He jerked the bell. "Now you get off, beat it back there, and see that girl gets home! You don't ride on this car!"

If somebody had shocked him with electricity, Haydon could not have been more startled. "A coward!" In a moment he was outside, the car was vanishing and he was saying to himself: "That's just what's wrong—I'm a coward!"

A new sensation caught and tore in his throat, a wrenching, raging force that was the pride of manhood roused and stung to the quick. He found himself sprinting down the avenue toward the side street up which the girl had fled.

The soft rubber soles of his shoes made little sound on the asphalt pave. He turned the street and listened. Down it at no great distance, he heard voices. He slid along through the shadows and the voices grew nearer.

Then he made out indistinctly through the darkness two figures just beyond him and at the same moment a terrified call for help broke the silence.

A snarl broke from Haydon's lips. He clutched forward wildly and his fingers sank into a throat—a man's! He ground his teeth and set his fingers with all his strength into the yielding flesh. He felt the man writhe under him, felt his startled cry fight for utterance under his relentless fingers.

Then followed a desperate pressure of muscles against his. His head was battered and bruised, his body tortured with the weight placed upon it; but his fingers held to the throat. Over and over, up and down, back and forth in the darkness and mire of the street, they struggled for the mastery until Haydon knew he had won.

A blinding light streamed into his face, voices called and a sharp voice said: "Let go, lad. You've got him all right, all right."

Haydon let go and sat up. Three policemen were lifting a limp figure into the tonneau of their car. One of them came back to him. "You better come along with us. You're battered up in great shape, if you only knew it. We'll take the girl along to her house."

Haydon, refusing the offered arm, staggered to the car, and, entering it, sank weakly into a seat. Something pressed against him in the darkness as the car started, something clasped around his neck and something warm and fragrant rested on his lips. Again a shock cleared his consciousness—the lips of the girl!

They left her at her home, a humble little place. Then the car turned away.

On the way back to the station, Haydon asked one of the officers how they happened to come.

"The conductor of one of the cars stopped in. We were doubtful, but we thought it would do no harm to run out. By the way, it must take some nerve to tackle a man thirty pounds heavier than you. We found a knife in the grass, too. How'd you do it?"

Haydon shook his head. "I lit in to him, that's all. But I'm going to get wise to a few boxing and wrestling stunts after this. I may need them. Something's been wrong with me for years. I haven't dared ask a girl to go to a show. I'm on now—you bet! A chap called me a—coward!" and it's the luckiest word I ever had spoken to me."

The policeman looked at him curiously. "You'll feel better after the surgeon fixes you up," he said, quietly.

MISS BELLE BEMENT WEDS J. C. EDMONDS AT KILBOURN HOME

KILBOURN, Wis., Oct. 10.—At a pretty home wedding Saturday evening Miss Belle Gale Bement, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harley R. Bement, of this city, became the bride of Jess Clark Edmonds, also of Kilbourn. The ceremony was solemnized at Dawn Manor House, the summer home of the bride's parents, at half-past eight o'clock in the evening, the Rev. O. E. De Witt, pastor of the Presbyterian church, officiating. The bridal march was played by the Peterson Harp orchestra, while following the ceremony Mrs. Harry Snider rendered several vocal solos.

The bride was attended by Miss Maud L. Coapman of Kilbourn, and Stuart B. Crothers of Hayti, S. D., was best man.

The bride was attired in a dainty gown of white embroidery and carried white roses. The bridesmaid's frock was of sheer white voile over pink silk.

Following the ceremony the bridal party and wedding guests partook of a luncheon served by twelve girls from the domestic science class of the Kilbourn high school. The girls were attired in dainty frocks of pink and white, in conformity with the general color scheme of pink and white predominating throughout the rooms.

The bride has long been a resident of Kilbourn and is one of the city's most popular young ladies. She is a graduate of Kilbourn high school and also of the Free & Shiner school at Mount Carroll, Ill., and has held the position of bookkeeper with the State bank at Waukegan, and also at the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank of Kilbourn.

Mr. Edmonds, like his bride, is an alumnus of Kilbourn high school, and for the past six years has been employed as railway mail clerk.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmonds left Saturday evening for a trip to Chicago and points in the east, and will be at home at Oak Villa, Kilbourn, after November 1.

LITTLE GIRL IS HOSTESS AT PARTY IN CALEDONIA HOME

CALEDONIA, Minn.—(Special.)—A pleasant birthday party was enjoyed last Sunday afternoon by a number of little folks at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nic Koel, the occasion being the seventh birthday of their little daughter, Bernadine. All sorts of games were played to the conclusion of which a delicious lunch was served to which they all did ample justice. The little hostess was presented with numerous gifts. What Thin Folks Should Do To Gain Weight

Good Advice For Thin, Underdeveloped Men and Women.

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinness, weak nerves and feeble stomachs, who, having tried advertised flesh-makers, food-fads, physical culture stunts and rub-on creams, resign themselves to life-long skinniness and think nothing will make them fat. Yet their case is not hopeless. A recently discovered combination of assimilative agents, has made fat grow after years of thinness, and it is also repairing the waste of sickness or faulty digestion and for strengthening the nerves. This remarkable preparation is called Sargol. Six strength-giving, fat-producing assimilative elements of acknowledged merit have been combined in this preparation, which is endorsed and used by prominent people everywhere. It is absolute, goes so far to produce flesh and strength by correcting faults of digestion and by supplying nourishing fats to the blood. If not every druggist who sells it is authorized to return the purchase price, increased to return the purchase price, if the product is not obtained from the food eaten, and the are thus provided. Hoecker Bros. and other leading druggists supply Sargol and say there is a large demand for it.

REEDSBURG SEES REUNION OF CIVIL WAR INFANTRY CO.

REEDSBURG, Wis.—(Special.)—Surviving members of the Nineteenth Wisconsin infantry, Civil War veterans, gathered in this city Thursday for their thirtieth annual reunion. The old soldiers spent the day visiting with former comrades and recalling experiences of the year's campaign.

This city has especial significance as a reunion place because many Reedsburg "boys" enlisted in the Nineteenth regiment at the call and Colonel R. M. Strong and Lieutenant H. A. Tator and A. P. SEDENTARY EXERCISE

The latest device for physical improvement is the chair exercises which enables the user to harden his muscles without leaving his seat. Two straps are provided which he grasps with his hands. The straps are attached to an iron bar behind the chair which is in turn attached to weights. These weights may be increased or reduced as desired. A foot brace in front of the chair gives the user support as he pulls upon the straps raising the weights to his utmost capacity. The chair exercise originated in the mind of an athlete who wanted to keep his arms hard while recovering from a fractured ankle.

Verse and Reverse

HE BUILDETH HIS HOUSE
He hewed him the gray cold rock
To make the foundations under.
The walls and the towers should lock
Fast the power of the earth to sunder.

Then, masking the bastions' frown,
Art came, embroidered and gilded,
That beauty and joy might crown
The palace which power had builded.
God sighed, "Why build so tall
Thy prison walls?"
—Lily A. Long in Poetry.

"The pilot's skill is by no means equally proved in a calm as in a storm. In the former case he tamely enters the port, unnoticed and unappreciated; but when the corgage creaks, the mast bends and the rudder groans, then it is that he shines out in all his glory."—Pitiny the Younger.

A SPUR FOR THE TORTOISE

Many citizens are worrying about the slow progress of the Mississippi street sewer. The city has the power to add considerable speed to the operations. Such contracts contain clauses providing for the payment of penalties for failure to complete work within the specified time. These penalties have not been exacted, with the result that contractors do as they please.

The city should notify both the sewer contractor and his bondsmen that the penalties positively will be collected. Not only that, but they should be collected. Time is of the essence of this contract, and the taxpayers are entitled to the delivery of the goods as per agreement.

Slow progress in sewer building is excused on the ground that labor is hard to secure. Alderman Frank Kohn makes a practical suggestion in this connection.

It is a favorite expedient for gentlemen of fortune, as winter approaches, to steal a pair of gloves or seize some other convenient passport to a ninety-day berth in a warm jail. The county houses and feeds these non-producers, and turns them out "when the swallows nest again." Alderman Kohn advises the city to employ these men on public improvements. The idea is that the man shall be put to work on the sewer, for instance, without breakfast. At noon the contractor feeds him, but does not pay him his wages. Since he has a half day's pay coming, the man is apt to return to finish his day. In this way intermittent workers may be kept on the job for a week, or perhaps a month. The city would save expense and the contractor would get the use of the man. The man himself would profit to the extent to which he made wise use of his wages.

THE MATTER OF A PEPPERCORN

Friends of Mr. Hughes hope that he will survive the handicap created by over-zealous campaigners in his behalf. Take the following paragraph, from the Leader-Press:

When President Wilson declares in public speeches that he doesn't care a peppercorn for the judgment of 1916, one feels that the president has a slight apprehension that the judgment of 1916 may not be favorable. He didn't talk that way of the judgment of 1912.

Now the president said nothing of the kind. The language is taken from a paragraph in his Omaha speech, and by the trick of elimination is made to appear a flippancy and an affront to the voters of 1916. The president was discussing the value of certain legislation, which he declared himself willing to submit to history's verdict. This is what he said:

"As compared with the verdict of the next twenty-five years, I do not care a peppercorn about the verdict of 1916, because I know how those laws were conceived."

The measures of which he spoke may be good or bad. The verdicts of both 1916 and of "twenty-five years" may be favorable or adverse. It doesn't matter. The point is that the president merely chose what every sensible man chooses—the calm judgment of the years to the snap-judgment of the campaign—and if quoted at all, he had a right to be so quoted. Nor is it fair to Mr. Hughes to inject into his canvass methods both petty and questionable. However, there is the reassuring reflection that, in the present instance, the misrepresentation doesn't matter "a peppercorn".

SPECULATIVE PROFITS

The story of fortunes garnered by the present bull market on Wall Street makes humdrum life seem tame. And even the small speculator is sometimes permitted to gather in quite luscious crumbs. In all times of speculative fever, there are stories of office boys and bell hops who have walked off with a few cool thousands.

What becomes of these speculative windfalls? Are they salted away in some secure bank? It seems very unlikely. What usually happens is that the freshman speculator acquires an inflated sense of his own business powers.

He may be located many miles from any speculative center. But after reading the newspaper financial report, he thinks that with all his inexperience and remote from the market, he can detect business currents hidden from the brightest minds in the business. Or perhaps he has a tip from some mysterious source. And informed that some noted speculator is about to promote a bull campaign in a certain stock, he is ready to gamble again.

After making one killing, the amateur usually risks the entire amount he has gained. Quite likely he draws out more savings so as not to neglect the golden door of opportunity.

In stock market speculation everything favors the insiders. They are close to each other. Some one always knows when a certain stock is going to advance its dividend. The people who know that fact give out no tips. They keep it to themselves. Or rather perhaps they give out tips that the stock is likely to pass its dividends. This encourages the small speculator to sell short and the insiders can buy dirt cheap and get the public both going and coming.

The little speculator is swept far out to sea with the great tide, of whose reach and sweep he had no conception. He is lucky if one experience is sufficient.

"Fire Prevention Day" was observed in La Crosse by the opening of a Baptist convention. Fire does not thrive with baptism, and the Baptist fire-escape is working well.

ESCAPE DEATH IN COLLISION

GREEN BAY, Wis., Oct. 10.—John Cochran, railroad engineer, and Allen Conley, farmer, narrowly escaped death when an automobile driven by H. H. Bentley of Neopit crashed into the buggy in which they were riding. The bug was demolished and the horse badly injured. The men suffered slight injuries.

KENOSHA ITALIAN STABBED

KENOSHA, Wis., Oct. 10.—John Jaquinia, 23, is in the Kenosha hospital with a knife wound eighteen inches long in his back, and may die. James Oliviero, another Italian, was arrested after a battle with the police and is held on charges of attempted murder.

Quips and Cranks and Wanton Wiles

Out of the Mouths of Kids
"Oh, dear!" exclaimed small Francis one sultry afternoon. "I wish I was rich."
"What would you do?" asked his mother.
"Well, for one thing," he replied, "I'd have the ice man bring me a skating rink every morning."

Distorted Communication
One of the methods of communicating from one officer to another in the trenches of the great war is to give the message to one of the privates and tell him to "pass the word along" the line until it reaches its destination—viz., the officer at the other end.
The following story will show how a serious message can be distorted on its journey from mouth to mouth: Lieutenant A—, in charge of one end of the British line, told the private in front, Paddy Muldoon, to pass the word along to Lieutenant B—. "We are going to advance. Can you send us reinforcements?"
When Lieutenant B— received the message it was like this: "We are going to a dance. Can you lend us fourpence?"

Nothing to Do With It
For several days Mandy, the faithful cook, failed to put in an appearance. Her mistress made anxious inquiries and found to her dismay that Mandy had been arrested. She hastened down to the court house to see what could be done.
"Why, Mandy?" she exclaimed, "what in the world have you been doing to get arrested?"
"Ah ain't been doin' nothin'" tall, Miss Anna," was the indignant reply. "All dis heah fuss is 'bout a lady named Miss Demeanor, and Ah ain't nevah even heahed of her befo'!"—Judge.

Parrot Learned, Too

They were speaking of hubby's boast of how beautiful he can keep house the other evening when this anecdote was smilingly released by Congressman Swager Sherley of Kentucky:

"Downtown recently Mrs. Jones met Mrs. Brown, and during the conversation that followed the latter told of a two weeks' visit that she had just made to the home of her mother."
"While I was away," continued Mrs. Brown, "my husband kept house and insisted on cooking his own meals."

"You don't really mean it," exclaimed Mrs. Jones. "How did he make out?"
"Well, answered Mrs. Brown, "heaving quite a long sigh "when I got back I noticed that the parrot had learned to swear."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Not a Thief

During the Crimean war an Irishman was charged with stealing his comrade's liquor. On being brought before the colonel he defended himself thus:
"I'd be sorry indeed, sir, to be called a thief. I put the liquor in the same bottle and mine was at the bottom; and, sure, I was obliged to drink his for get mine. Och, sir, I'd scorn to be a thief!"

This very ingenious defense got him off.

THE TRIBUNE'S DAILY TRAVELETTE

(By Nilsah)

THE CHURCH OF THE BLACK CHRIST

Opposite the thieves' market in Mexico City, wedged in between two higher buildings, is a tiny church with a single dome. It is attended mostly by the very poor, the criminal and the sick. But it has one distinction: the figure of Christ above the altar is black as a negro, and bears at its feet the amazing inscription: "The Lord of Poison."

This is explained by the church authorities in a story. There was a certain archbishop who had a great many enemies, and each night he used to kneel before a small ivory figure of the Christ, kiss its feet, and pray to it for protection. His enemies learned of this practice and placed poison on the feet of the image; but the ivory absorbed the poison, turning black and thereby warning the good priest.

There are two other black Christs in Mexican churches, and by whatever stories their color may be explained, it is evident that they were designed to make the Son of God seem more of a brother to the dark-skinned Indian. One of these in a Vera Cruz church wears a blue velvet loin cloth and a cheap crown, has his right hand nailed to a cross and holding a string of paper roses.

A common figure in Mexican churches is that of San Benito, the Holy Negro. His figure is always generously draped with votive ribbons. It is said that when a woman becomes angry at her husband and wants to get rid of him, she will secretly measure him with a piece of ribbon, place it in the hand of the figure of San Benito, and pray for his death. He will surely die.

"Caught!" he cried with the joyousness of one who, having spent the entire afternoon trying not to be bored, sees a delightful diversion. "Hand over the family spoons, and I will say nothing."
"There are spoons and spoons," returned Miss Varney, rallying her weary spirits to entertain her guest. She gave a bit of a sigh before she realized it, and Ricky was at once all tenderness.

His boyish face looked so kind and anxious, she laughed and gave him a little pat on the arm. "There is little to earn and many to keep," she quoted, smiling into his frank gray eyes. Beyond the yew hedge, from the sweet seclusion of the flower garden, a thrush called softly in the warm fragrant twilight, one clear steady note with a bit of a trill at the end. The long shadows were creeping across the deep velvet of the lawn. Miss Varney, hardly conscious of what she did, lured by the peace of the coming twilight, descended the porch steps and strolled pensively toward the small green gate in the high hedge. Ricky trotted contentedly after her, wondering what she meant by "many to keep."

Could it be possible that she was married and like Maude clung to her personality in her name, and like Cally, spurred on by Maude, was determined to be economically independent? These economically independent women always used all their wages to pay another woman to take care of their children, be the mother while they played the man. He looked at her graceful slender back, at the soft white of her neck where the hair clustered above the edge of her dainty evening gown, and decided that her back certainly looked delightfully, extravagantly dependent. Maybe she was divorced. The man was probably a brute and she had left him in self-defense and taken the children with her and now in her proud sweetness, having refused to accept alimony, was supporting them herself. This thought, too, he put aside. The innocence of virgin girlhood clung to her as the fragrance of the single rose she wore in the folds of her kerchief clung to the delicate pink petals. Who could the "many" be?

She had reached the gate and he hastened to open it for her, standing aside that she might pass in ahead of him. He bent eagerly and asked impulsively, "Who are the many?" Then he flushed crimson at his unbridled curiosity and stammered forth a weak apology for his rudeness.

She raised her head and looked at him. "The many?" she asked, having already forgotten her question. "The many men you are thinking about," said Ricky lamely, glad to hide curiosity under however crude a joke.

"Many—wories," she corrected him, smiling.

"I have to," said she. "How can I help it? Miss Appleby—she was a she. Near the gate was a small rustic seat and she sank into it, instinctively drawing her skirts aside to make room for Ricky. "Miss Appleby—" again she paused.

"Must be a Tartar," finished Ricky sympathetically. "Beggings your pardon."

"No, no," she shook her head and gazed down the box-bordered path. "She does not approve of divorce."

"Nor of men, I guess," said Ricky cheerfully. "She never got married though she must have had chances with all her money."

Miss Varney nodded, hardly hearing his words in her own anxious thoughts and the relief to have some one in whom she could in a measure confide. "I am so afraid she will be angry."

"Angry? With whom?"

"With all," said Miss Varney boldly. "Where is Vera Van Fleet's husband?"

"Sammy? He's home."

"Are they—divorced?"

"Not yet, but they hope to be soon. You see Sammy wants the sitting-room called a sitting-room, done over in green with red roses and purple upholstery. Vera wants the room called a library, done in pastel shades with old mission furniture and one picture."

"If there were only more of you coupled and less uncoupled," commented Ricky.

"How am I ever going to introduce you all," wailed Miss Varney. "I shall have to use this book—" "For heaven's sake, don't lose that book," begged Ricky. "It is the only thing that can keep us all straight."

Miss Varney, running idly through the book, nodded and paused at the H's. "Now, Mr. Harkness—he isn't married. His mother was an Appleby, but he—I am afraid there is something the matter with him."

"By jove," said Ricky. "Tuberculosis?"

"No—the law."

"The law?" stammered Ricky.

Miss Varney nodded firmly. "I think he is 'wanted,'" said she grimly.

"By jove," said Ricky.

"What can I do?" asked Miss Varney helplessly. "You and Nelly, and Maude and Tommy, are the only connected ones there are. The rest are disconnected."

"I'll telegraph Sammy to come," declared Ricky, all eagerness to help.

"That'll be another complete couple."

67 DAISY DEAN

Joan Sawyer's wonderful dancing will not be lost to the world because she has joined the ranks of the silent drama.

In the new William Fox photoplay in which Miss Sawyer is now busily at work under the direction of Tefft Johnson, the famous society danseuse has several opportunities to display her art. The picture has a background of gypsy life, and the first steps the noted dancer takes for the films are photographed at midnight in the glow of the gypsy's campfire.

The plot of Miss Sawyer's initial production has been planned out so carefully that the dancing, in each instance, fits in naturally with, and is essential to, the story.

Cleo Madison Is a Brave Girl

One of the bravest actresses in moving pictures today is Cleo Madison, the beautiful star, who has been the heroine of many of these deeds. She was the girl of the derrier. She also played a part where she was required to uncouple a speeding train. One especially more daring than any other was an auto race. The story called for her to get every ounce of speed possible out of the auto she was driving. She was being pursued. The car behind her must blow at a given place.

In order to destroy the pursuing auto a time fuse was inserted in the gas tank. It was figured that going at so many miles an hour it would explode at a certain place. Now there was a great danger to the man driving the car. He could not look back to see how far the fuse had burned, but had to depend on its accuracy and jump half a minute before it exploded.

It was required that the pursued car be only a short distance in front so that the impression be given that it was about to be overtaken. This also endangered the driving of the other car by Cleo Madison. Everything fortunately came out all right. But with the explosion of the car pieces of wood and parts flew in every direction, some of it showering around the camera.

Few actresses have taken the chances Cleo Madison has since she made her screen debut. She has fought on the edge of cliffs; leaped from speeding express trains, and BOSTON, Oct. 10.—Except for the howling forty-mile gale that swept in from the northeast Monday night was the most quiet night off the New England coast since the German submarine U-53 sailed out of Newport late Saturday.

No vessels passing along the "lane" off the Nantucket Light cracked their wireless or gave any other sign of their presence. The German undersea monsters were equally quiet and apparently have vanished as suddenly as they appeared.

The Nantucket radio station reported that "all keys were silent" throughout the night and the Charlestown navy yard station said they had little to do and heard nothing from the vicinity of the U-boat zone.

No word has been heard from the French-Canadian liner Great City, cargoed with contraband and bound for St. Nazaire, France. She left Boston early Monday morning and was due to pass through the "submarine war zone" some time during the night.

The American Hawaiian liner Kamsan, the only liner carrying munitions for the allies that escaped being sunk by the submarine, although her papers were examined Sunday, has not left her pier in Charlestown. The French-Canadian office declares that the shipment of horses which she stopped here for on her way from New York to St. Nazaire has delayed her start but it is felt that the Kaiser's undersea navy is the real cause.

When it became known that the Kamsan stopped at Boston to take on more grain and two thousand horses it was the belief in shipping circles that one of the U boats intended to "lay" for her when she left Boston. The Kamsan is an American registered vessel, but is under charter to the French-Canadian line.

Washing Won't Rid Head Of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

FAMOUS NOVEL IS PUT INTO FILMS

In the role of the war correspondent, C. Aubrey Smith is opening a two-day engagement at the Majestic Tuesday in William J. Locke's most famous novel, "Jaffery." He is supported by the well known Eleanor Woodruff. The story is one which captivated America a few years ago in book form, and through perfect direction and photography of the Frohman Amusement company, it is made to stand out as do few photographs.

When Majestic audiences saw lovely Norma Talmadge, first in the role of a pretty stenographer, and then in the make-up of a homely old spinster who is forced to disguise herself, in Triangle's production of "The Social Secretary," they were treated to the initial appearance of another distinct Triangle hit.

At the close of the picture several scenes of Miss Dorothy Gish's picture, "Diana of the Poolies," to be the Majestic attraction next Monday were shown. The scheme will be practiced in every Griffith and Ince offering on the Triangle program in the future.

Almost everything has been explained by scientists except why doctors and dentists' offices never have a magazine on view less than three months old.

COMPETITION SHOWS RUSHFORD RURAL SCHOOLS ADVANCE

RUSHFORD, Minn.—(Special.)—That the rural schools, which are affiliated with the city schools of Rushford, are forging ahead at a rapid rate is demonstrated by the showing of those districts which are under the direction of the central (or Rushford) school. The exhibits would have been better in both quality and quantity had all the rural districts in the competition commenced the fall term at more nearly the same time. As it was, some districts had but a few days in which to work up their exhibits, while others had fully twice the time in which to work. The Johns district, No. 49, captured six of the prizes; four first and two second. Following is the list of districts and the premiums taken: Penmanship, 49, 13; relief map of Minnesota, 49, 49; relief map of continent, 17, 12; map of any kind, 13, 49; product map, 12, 17; language (4 booklets), 49, 87; industrial map, elementary handwork, 38, 87; sewing, 87, 13; leaves of trees, 35, 183; mounted weeds and seeds, 160, 89; corn, 154, 96; vegetables, 35, 17; model school, 12, 18; grain exhibit, 49, 13. The central school did not compete for prizes. All associated schools represented except two, which opened too late. The foregoing numbers represent the number of the school districts.

In stepping out of a carriage in which she had been riding, her foot slipped and she was thrown to the ground, striking upon her left side and fracturing a rib. So far as could be learned upon an examination, no internal injuries were sustained, but the accident will keep her confined to her bed and room for some time.

Chas. Nicholas, a former Rushford resident, is in this city with C. E. Pearson; both the gentlemen being interested in Washburn county, Wisconsin, land. The two have leased room in the John Peterson and Sons' office, in which to exhibit vegetables, grain, etc., from the territory mentioned.

NEW MUSIC HEAD AT NORMAL IS MUSICAL PRODIGY

Prof. R. V. Morgan provided the entertainment at the bi-weekly chapel exercises at the normal Tuesday morning with a delightfully presented musical program. Mr. Morgan is taking the position on the normal faculty left vacant for the year by Homer Cotton's departure, and vies with the former director of music in popularity with the student body. Mr. Morgan not only masters the piano but plays almost any instrument placed before him by the students. Not only is classical music his specialty but popular airs as well. Notes from Mr. Morgan's instruments find a place at most every social gathering at the institution.

THOMAS FUNERAL WEDNESDAY

Funeral services for John Thomas, who died Sunday evening at his home, 1828 Charles street, will be held at 2:30 Wednesday afternoon from the Tetley, Sletten and Dahl chapel, 211 South Sixth street. Burial will be in the family lot in Oak Grove cemetery.

TO END CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmit (double strength), and add to it 1 pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day. This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Any one who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Perfect Being.

Once upon a time there was a human being who never made a mistake. And his neat little tombstone records the fact that he was one day old when he died.

NORMAL WEEKLY MAKES ITS BOW FOR 1916 YEAR

The first issue of the "Racquet," the official student organ of the normal, made its appearance at the school Monday. No effort has been made on the part of the staff to collect subscriptions as yet, the four-page paper being distributed among the student body free of charge.

Cabaret Saturday

The "Racquet" staff is planning to hold the first cabaret that has been attempted at the school in the gymnasium on Saturday night in the nature of an entertainment for the visiting Dubuque football men, who struggle here on that date. The proceeds will be used by the staff to defray an old debt incurred by former editors.

Following is the staff selected to run the school periodical this year: Editor, Margaret Bodenstien; Associate Editor, Bessie Cole; Society Editor, Marie Christian; Exchange Editor, Marion Vesey; Illustrating, Mildred Levis and Martha Prohart; Reporters, Marie Esch, Donald Clark, James McKivergin, Roy Benjamin, Alice Taylor, Arthur Nelson, and Vera Kelly; Faculty advisors, Mr. D. O. Coate and Mrs. J. R. Moore; Business Manager, Marcellus Miller; Advertising Manager, Winifred Gordon; Circulation Managers, Joseph Baker and Charles Swatek.

Normal Notes

The college course students at the normal are planning to hold one of their mid-semester mixers on Friday evening at the school.

The time for the devotional meetings of the normal school Y. M. C. A. has been changed from the chapel period on Monday, when they were held last year, to Monday evening before the literary society meetings. The first religious gathering of the year was held last night at 6:30. A large number of the men turned out and signified the intentions of taking an active part in the Y. work.

Following the Y. meeting, the Eclectic debating society held its regular meeting and discussed the advisability of returning Woodrow Wilson to the president's chair. Considerable spirit was manifested in the informal discussion. The time for the Eclectic's meetings has also been changed in the intervals between meetings. While they were previously held weekly, they will now occur at intervals of two weeks.

Comfortable Homes Help.

The better farm home is not a panacea for all ills of dissatisfaction with farm life. There will be farm boys and farm girls who will want to take up other professions than tilling the soil. The problem, says the department of agriculture, is not to force them to stay on the farm, but to make conditions good enough there that they may make an intelligent choice.

CHILD GETS SICK CROSS, FEVERISH IF CONSTIPATED

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach or bowels.

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftentimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

ANOTHER WOMAN TO JOIN THE RANKS OF INDORSERS FOR THE MASTER MEDICINE

Mrs. Martha Holtz, who lives at 1213 Franklin street, Racine, said while talking to the Tanlac representative a few days ago:

"I have been trying to convince myself to try Tanlac as I had read of it in the daily papers here in Racine and so many people had testified to its merit and wonderful restorative powers that I was sure it must be good, but was not thoroughly convinced until the other day while reading a German paper published in Minnesota, I saw a very strong indorsement of Tanlac from one whom I knew."

"In view of the fact that it was not only being sold and indorsed so highly in Wisconsin but in other states as well, I knew or believed that Tanlac had merit and now I am loud in my praises of it, for a thorough trial has convinced me of its merit." She further said while describing her condition:

"My digestion was very bad, I liked good things to eat as a rule, but when I suffered after eating my favorite dishes, with an accumulation of gas in my stomach which pressed on my heart and caused terrible pain, it took all of the pleasure out of my meals. I was awfully nervous and I could not sleep at nights. In fact, at times I was so nervous I did not know what I was doing. My husband would have to get up out of bed and work around with me until he could get me quiet."

"Since I started taking Tanlac I feel a whole lot better and my stomach does not hurt me. The pains are gone from around my heart. My digestion is wonderfully improved. I am no longer bothered with an accumulation of gas after eating. My nervous spells have vanished and now my husband and I can get a good night's rest, as I do not have any more of those terrible spells."

"I heartily indorse Tanlac, as it is the only thing that has given me any relief, and I have tried many other kinds of medicines."

J. C. HENDERSON, the Tanlac man, located at C. A. BEGUN'S DRUG STORE, Majestic Building, will be only too glad to explain the merits of Tanlac to those who are interested and he will tell you of thousands of people who have had just the same experience with Tanlac that Mrs. Holtz had.

SOCIETY

SUFFRAGE WORKER HERE

Mrs. Helen B. McDowell, state suffrage organizer for Wisconsin, is engaged in active organization work in La Crosse, and will make this city her headquarters for some time.

Mrs. McDowell has an especial gift for the kind of work she is doing, and has had wide experience. When the vote in Iowa last June on the woman suffrage amendment was counted it was found that the best record was in the three river districts which was under the management of Mrs. McDowell. Keokuk, in her district, was the only important river town which carried for suffrage.

Mrs. McDowell is a Wisconsin girl, a member of the prominent Bain family of Kenosha. She was educated at Kempter hall, and later married Gerald R. McDowell, then at the head of the Racine College grammar school. Somewhat later they went to Denver to reside. There Mrs. McDowell saw the workings of woman suffrage, noted that the home women, the best and most thoughtful women, do vote, and decided that woman suffrage was both right and best. Going to Michigan to live, Mrs. McDowell became president of a large county association during the campaign of 1912 and carried her county for the cause. She did a large amount of work in southwestern Wisconsin, and last January she went to Iowa and remained hard at work until the election. Her district included seven counties in the southeastern part of the state and she won golden opinions from all familiar with the situation for the results which she achieved.

MMANN-MERWIN

At half-past six o'clock this morning, Miss Mae Alice Merwin (daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Merwin, 521 South Sixth street, and Arthur McMann were united in marriage by Rev. Robert B. Condon at St. Mary's church.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the bride's home, at which were present only immediate relatives. The table decorations were Killarney roses.

The bride was gowned in her going-away costume of blue broadcloth. Mr. and Mrs. McMann left at noon for a honeymoon trip to the Twin cities.

Mrs. Edward L. Colman was hostess at dinner at the Country club Monday evening. There were twelve guests.

Monday evening Miss Betty Hixon gave a dancing party at the Country club in honor of Frederick and Sandy Paul, who leave soon to attend school in the east. There were thirty young people present.

Mrs. Jessie M. Holway and Mrs. Agyle Scott entertained a company of thirty-five at a tea at the club Monday afternoon.

A telegram was received today from Miss Ellen C. Sabin, president of Milwaukee-Dowder college, stating that she would be unable to stop over in La Crosse on her way to Minneapolis. It was her original intention to spend part of Tuesday and Wednesday in the city.

PICNIC SUPPER

The boys of Mrs. Edwin C. Dixon's Sunday school class enjoyed a picnic supper at the parlors of the First Methodist church Monday evening. There were nine boys present and all assisted in the preparation and serving of the supper, which was followed by games of various kinds. A peanut race afforded much amusement, and another entertaining feature of the evening was a mock trial, in which Leo Brague was arraigned before Judge Bradford Dixon for the theft of a bicycle.

Nowels has been a widower for many years and his bride-to-be is a divorcee. They are going to live in a neat little cottage on the groom's farm in Houston county.

Mrs. Dawson was smiling prettily as she held Nowels' arm while he purchased the license of County Clerk Bert A. Jolivet on Tuesday morning.

"I've seen America foot by foot," said Clarence White Eagle, who walked into The TRIBUNE office Tuesday morning bright and early with the announcement that he was the only and original Indian hiker. Clarence says he is part Comanche, from Fort Sill, Okla., and that he is on the last leg of a 13,000 mile walk from Chicago to the Pacific coast, back to the Atlantic coast, and home.

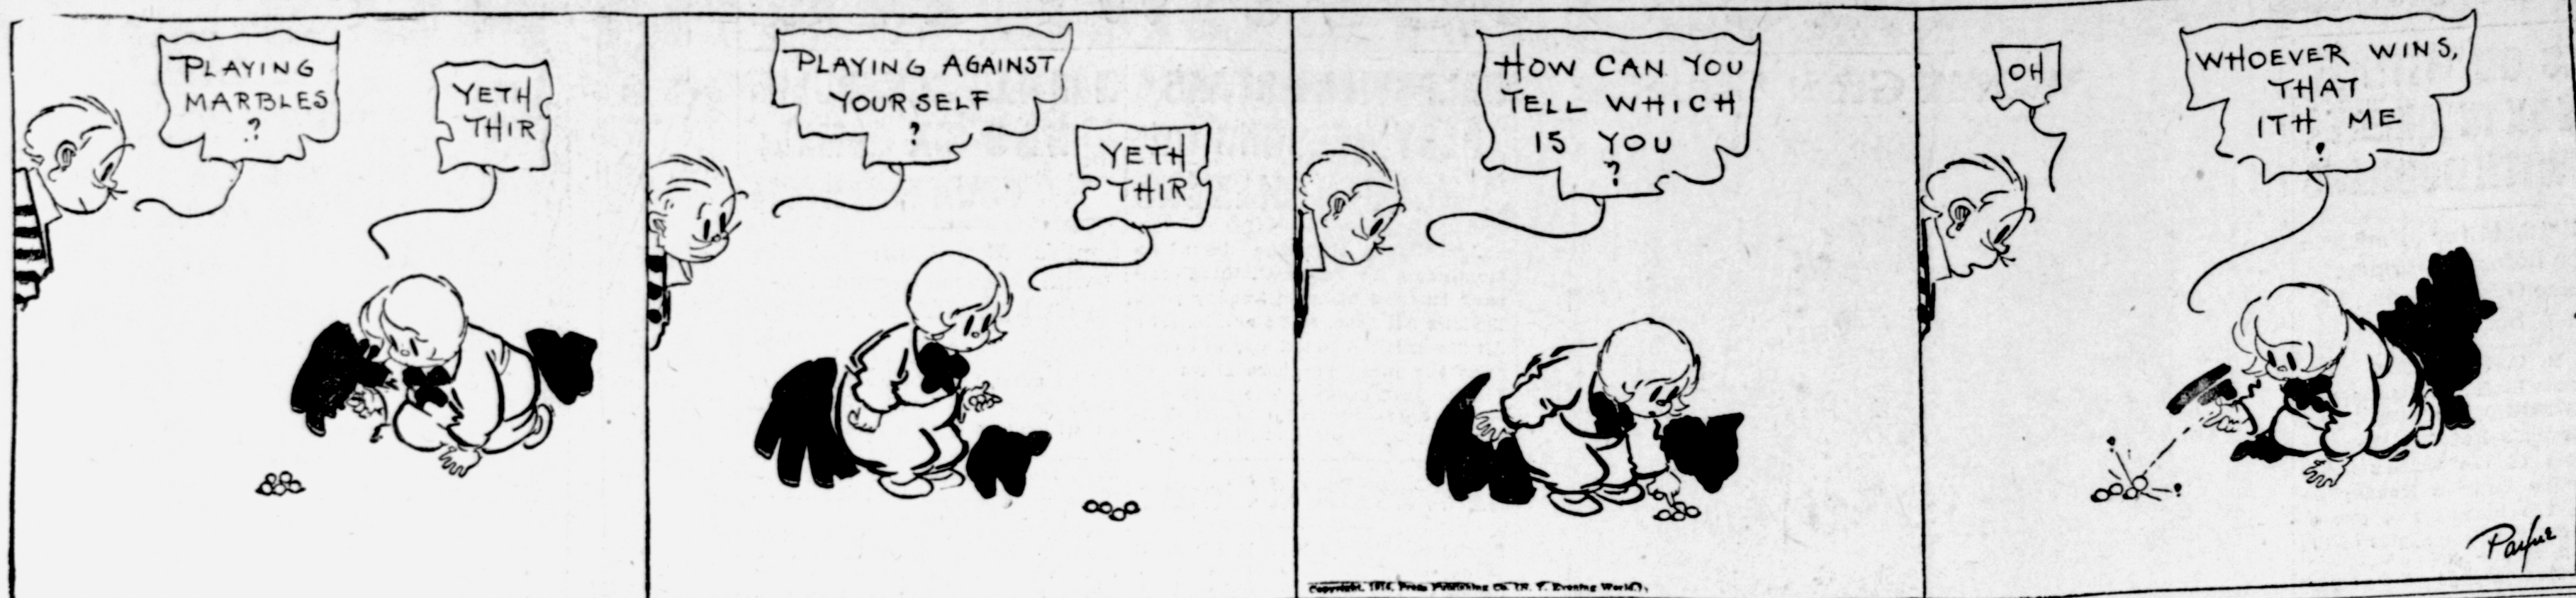

White Eagle says he left Chicago October 16, 1915, with two white men. They were Jack A. Dalton, 56, and Joe Fitzgerald, 18, he says. They challenged him to the long walk but were forced to quit when they reached Sacramento, Cal.

While White Eagle says he has worn out thirty-five pairs of shoes, he comments that his greatest trouble has been dodging I. W. W. stick-up men.

The Water-Witch Condemned

Uncle Sam Delivers Crushing Blow to Hoary Superstition That Hazel Switch Can Find Water.

By Frederic J. Haskin
WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 10.—The ancient practice of detecting the presence of water in the earth by means of divining rods has enjoyed a long career in this country. Uncle Sam has now, however, passed sentence upon this hoary idea. The United States Geological Survey in Washington constantly receives a large number of inquiries from people all over the country concerning the divining rod. Is the device any good? Does it actually do what the water-witcher says it does? In answer to these questions, Arthur J. Ellis, a geologist of the survey, has now compiled a report, giving the history of the divining rod from the Middle Ages up to the present day, and exposing all the numerous absurdities in its record. This report is now in the press room of the Government Printing office and will soon be available for distribution.

Many electrical devices known as divining rods have been invented in recent years with very little success, but the real divining rod, as it has come down to us through the centuries, is a simple forked twig cut from a hazel or peach tree. Why the preference was shown for peach and hazel is not known any more than the origin of the rod itself, but these are the woods that are supposed to produce the best results. Grasping this forked branch firmly by both prongs, with the main stem pointing horizontally ahead and tilting a little upward, the water-witcher walks gravely over the country and tells you just which sections contain water and which do not. The theory is that whenever the divining rod passes over a place where there is water it will either point down or begin to twitch violently, of its own accord, impelled by the electric currents which follow underground bodies of water.

As a matter of fact, however, the spots selected by the water-witcher which do happen to contain water are usually those which a keen-eyed layman could readily pick out without the assistance of the hazel tree, and often the water-witcher is wrong. A few years ago, for example, a land company in a New England section had just completed several artesian wells which were to furnish a new community with water. Some of the wells were not successful, having promptly gone dry. The company was criticised for not having called in the services of a certain well-known water witching expert before starting the work, thereby saving the property owners money. In answer to this criticism the land company asked the water-witcher in question to walk blindfolded over this section of the country, including the wells, and by the use of his divining rod tell which wells contained water and which were dry. The divining rod in this case proved absolutely incorrect, the water-witcher stating that the dry wells contained water and pronouncing the good wells dry.

In spite of countless experiments of this sort in which the results have been anything but favorable to the water-witcher, many people still accept the verdict of the divining rod as final. This is probably because, on the whole, the water-witchers believe in it themselves. They are absolutely convinced that the stem of the hazel fork is attracted to the ground by unknown agencies, such as electricity, and that they themselves have nothing to do with its movement. The cases are explained by the Geological Survey on a scientific basis. The movement of the rod is caused by unconscious muscular action on the part of the water-witcher. He comes to a place where the lay of the land indicates or suggests that there is water underneath it. At the same instant that this thought is registered in his conscious mind, his subconscious mind is manipulating the muscles of his arms and hands, and the divining rod, of course, moves. Of course there is nothing to prevent the water-witcher from consciously manipulating the hazel branch to his own ends.

There is other evidence against this survival of the dark ages. In a series of experiments described by the survey, water-witchers were unable to detect strong water currents in tunnels which afford no surface indications of water; their decisions in certain limestone districts "where water flows in well-defined channels" were no more accurate than those based on mere guess, and in every case where they walked blindfolded their locations were wrong. "In fact," says the survey bulletin, "operators of the divining rod are successful only in regions in which ground water occurs in a definite sheet of porous material or in more or less clayey deposits, such as pebbly clay or till. In such regions few failures can occur, for wells can get water almost anywhere." In view of these facts, the survey strongly advises people not to spend money in hiring professional water-witchers.

Perhaps no other one subject has ever attracted so much heated discussion and careful investigation as the divining rod, without accomplishing any positive results. Attached to the survey's new report is a bibliography of hundreds of books which have been written on the subject in the past two hundred years. Some authors are convinced that the un-supernatural causes; others believe that its alleged power is based on scientific principles, and still others, like the survey, believe that it is not the hazel branch at all, but the keen eye and mind of the water-witcher which oftentimes make an accurate guess.

The activities of the divining rod, however, have not been confined to the detection of underground bodies of water. It is as versatile a piece of wood as the wand of a fairy godmother. In the past it has been used to locate hidden treasure, to detect the presence of ore deposits in the earth, and to point out those guilty of witchcraft and other crime. In the year 1692 a young French peasant suddenly astonished the world by apprehending a notorious criminal through the agency of the divining rod. France was greatly excited. The peasant, whose name was Jacques Aymar, was immediately summoned to Paris, where he was showered with attentions from the court, which desired to recover stolen brooches and letters. In the majority of cases he was remarkably successful, and the fame of his rod spread all over Europe until the fraud was exposed by a few experiments made by the clever Prince de Conti. Then it appeared that Aymar was simply a very shrewd detective, two or three centuries ahead of his profession, who quietly followed up his clues and then went over the same ground with his divining rod, making people believe that it was the source of his amazing knowledge. Detectives were not appreciated in those days, but witchcraft was—Aymar was an opportunist.

The divining rod was also formerly used to determine the location of ore deposits. Once in a while it would prove correct, but the majority of times the miners dug their trenches without encountering anything but hard labor. An interesting account of this superstition in practice is given in a translation of Georgius Agricola's "De re Metallica," which is quoted in the survey report, made by H. C. Hoover, the American mining engineer who has recently risen to the front in the Belgian relief work. This old work describes the early European miners as "wandering hither and thither at random through mountainous regions" with the divining rods held in front of them, confident that the moment they placed their feet on a vein of ore the forked branch would begin to turn and twist.

There was supposed to be a scientific reason for the use of the rod in discovering ore deposits, just as there is a scientific reason given today for its use in detecting the presence of water. It was the belief of the educated men of the day that metallic ores attracted certain trees, causing them to droop over places containing such ores. Thus a branch of the tree was supposed to answer the same purpose. Sometimes it was necessary to utter a number of weird incantations and invoke the aid of Providence and the devil, but this was usually a matter of personal taste and did not seem to affect the results one way or the other.

This versatile scientific record and its otherwise peculiar history has not

PIMPY? WELL, DON'T BE!

People Notice It. Drive Them Off with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights. Cleanse the blood, the bowels and the liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel—there's never any sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating. No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result.

prevented the superstition from gaining a hold in this country. There is now hardly a county in the United States which has not a well-known water-witcher who claims to be able to locate water with his hazel fork. Chevy Chase, Maryland, for example, has recently been a center of such activities, but as yet no valuable decisions have been rendered. For some reason the land in this locality will not readily produce water. Both state and government geologic experts have investigated the matter and found that the rock in this section is a hard and close-grained kind through which the water can not penetrate. These scientists are still trying to work out a means by which the water may be brought to the surface. In the meantime, however, the water-witchers are taking daily hikes over the country, armed with hazel branches.

The divining rod is likely to die hard, but the publication of the survey's report will undoubtedly mean the end of a good many professional water-witchers in this country. According to the government scientists, nothing has ever been invented to detect the presence of water in the earth but common sense, the possession of which does not depend upon the divining.

CELEBRATES CHEESE DAY

MONROE, Wis., Oct. 10.—Monroe held its third annual "Cheese Day" celebration Tuesday and as a feature of the entertainment served 15,000 visitors with free coffee and cheese sandwiches—Swiss, limburger or ordinary "store" cheese, to suit the taste. The celebration was designed to call public attention to the fact that Monroe is the commercial center of the largest cheese producing section of the American continent. It also served to demonstrate the fact that Wisconsin produces as excellent cheese as ever were imported from France, Germany, Holland or Switzerland.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—The marriage of Ruth J. Babcock and Ferny R. Harris of Austin, Minn., which takes place today at the home of the bride's parents in Evanston, marks the culmination of a romance that had its origin in an advertising photograph. It was only a few months ago that Harris first learned that his bride of today was beautiful. She was a model. One day she posed for a photograph—she was wearing a new Paris hat. A copy of the photograph found its way to Harris' home town in Minnesota. Harris saw it and his outlook on life was instantly changed. There was no name except of the Chicago company for whom the photograph was made. Harris came to Chicago accordingly and made it his business to get acquainted with the heads of the company, until he had influence enough to get the name he wanted. He found her at last, got an introduction and was permitted to call at the Babcock home.

400 PER CENT MELON TO BE CUT BY ARMOURS

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—With bacon retailing at thirty-five cents a pound, Armour & Company, big packing house, will cut a 400 per cent melon. The distribution will be in the form of a stock distribution which will increase the capital stock of the company from $20,000,000 to $100,000,000.

Financial authorities say that the war contracts accepted by Armour & Company have been vastly profitable and that the surplus is now much more than $100,000,000.

R. J. Dunham, vice president of Armour & Company, said that the huge profits shown in the meat business were largely earned from 1901 to 1912 and therefore had no bearing on the present high prices of meat.

La Crosse Chamber of Commerce News Notes

BY JAMES R. KINSLOE

(By James R. Kinsloe, Executive Secretary.)

Another Big Idea

To implant the thought of La Crosse in the minds of its own people. The idea is simple. Translated into action, The Big Idea means a single-minded and many-handed citizenship which can accomplish anything.

Single-minded, many-handed citizenship is the practical solution of every problem or difficulty that lies before La Crosse, and is the only solution. Many-minded citizenship is no-minded citizenship, with its many hands hanging inert—paralysis instead of power!

Power lies in the big idea of a community, just as the brain is the course or control of individual energy. It takes the big idea to make citizens—a collective psychology, collective interest, common purpose and a certain intensity of local patriotism. The big idea in La Crosse should be greater than the Chamber of Commerce of La Crosse or any other group less than the whole citizenship. But the Chamber of Commerce of La Crosse embodying the idea in force, offers a nucleus to which greater and greater force must be drawn. The Chamber of Commerce of La Crosse is destined to grow and develop power, as the engine of greatest good to the greatest number. It is the great means at hand.

Today the greatest need in La

Crosse is for more CITIZENS. Fortunately, La Crosse does not have to go outside of the city to look for them. They are here, potentially, to be "made."

Strictly speaking, our population is divided into citizens and mere residents. The latter help to fill up. Their noses serve to be counted when the census man passes by. They swell the directory. They are perfectly good consumers. They animate the landscape, supply crowds, make a noise like citizens, they are the "supers" who play the part of "populace, villagers, et cetera," in the great metropolitan drama. Otherwise they don't count.

Must Die, Move or Pay Up

The Sterling (Ill.) Association of Commerce has filed suit against three members in a justice court for non-payment of dues. Three delinquents a week will be used until all accounts are squared.

The directors figure that as about three hundred persons had kept their dues paid up to date it was not fair to those who had paid to not collect from the remainder. The directors felt that they were elected to run the organization on a business basis.

They go on to say that the only way for a member to be relieved from payment of dues was to die, to move out of the county, or by release by the board of directors.

Get in the Game

Don't try to live ON the town and call yourself a "business man." Don't be a free rider.

The undesirable business man "lives on the town, but not in it." He is alien to common welfare, and enemy as well. Parasitic selfishness is inimical to general business health. And instincts of health and vigor are opposed to the parasite. The community parasite thrives only until its presence is detected when the community's hand is raised against it. Parasitic selfishness does not pay in the long run. Its punishment may lie in waiting for a long time, but the punishment is sure.

Justice works simply. How can the free rider expect to escape the notice of the fellows who are doing the pulling? Isn't it human nature for them to "get his number?" It is a mere law of physics that you must either pull your share or be a drag on the next fellow. He discovers what sort of man he has at his elbow, and passes the word to the next fellow and it is passed on to the next. Two or three men's opinion becomes the opinion of two or three dozen, and that becomes public opinion. Between private opinion and public opinion, the undesirable business man's fate is not a happy one.

However, it is not our recommendation that he be taken out and hanged. "While the lamp holds out to burn, the vilest sinner may return," and the most undesirable business man may be led into the fold and converted into the most desirable business man.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH MEETS WEDNESDAY

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 10. — The general convention of the Protestant Episcopal church will open here on Wednesday morning. One hundred and twenty bishops and more than six hundred clerical and lay deputies have arrived in the city, together with two English bishops and an archbishop from Canada.

The formal opening of the convention will be marked by an imposing service in the Moolah Temple. The music will be rendered by a selected choir of 150 voices and one hundred and thirty bishops gorgeously robed in the Episcopal habit will march in procession. The sermon will be preached by Dr. Tuttle, presiding bishop of the church who this year celebrates the fiftieth anniversary of his election to the episcopate.

NO STOMACH PAIN, GAS, INDIGESTION IN FIVE MINUTES

"Pape's Diapiesin" is the only real stomach regulator known.

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapiesin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapiesin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapiesin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest surest and most harmless stomach regulator in the world.

KINGDOM OF GOD NOT CHURCH SAYS BAPTIST DIVINE

Annual Convention Sermon Delivers Pointed Punches at Conventional Religion

NO PASSES TO HEAVEN

One Must Pay as He Prays Declares Rev. W. R. Yard of Delavan

Pulpit Punchers

"There was a time when a man could congregate his family in morning prayers and in the afternoon beat his neighbor in a horse trade and still be called a member of the Kingdom of God."

"Men must pay as they pray." "Men want to be carried to heaven on flowery beds of ease."

"You cannot scare a man into religion."

"There are too many automobiles and they are too comfortable to ride in to give up this world."

"The belief in a fiery, bottomless pit has been lost. People think a new bottom has been put into it."

"Many people think they have a free ticket for the ride to heaven."

In a stirring sermon in which he defined the modern Christian religion as a means for service on earth rather than as a means for riding to heaven on a free ticket, and in which he declared emphatically that the terms "kingdom of God" and "Church of God" were widely different in their meaning, the importance of the one being vastly superior to the other, Rev. W. R. Yard, pastor of the Baptist church at Delavan, Wis., delivered the annual sermon to a large audience attending the opening session of the seventy-second Wisconsin State Baptist convention. The session was held at the First Baptist church.

The address of welcome to the delegates was delivered by Dr. Henry Clay Evenson, secretary of the La Crosse Church Federation. Dr. Evenson spoke in the place of F. H. Scofield, federation president.

He praised the work of Rev. W. J. Peacock here, in telling briefly of his endeavors in the recent organization of La Crosse churches.

His Doctrine of Publicity

"When we go to church," he said, "we want an ocean of joy. It is our own fault if we do not get it. We must put something into our attendance at church."

Dr. Evenson declared that churches should advertise more than is the custom.

"I do not mean advertising of the billboard variety, but we ought to advertise the social side of church life. Advertising is met with opposition by the so-called ethical views. People can be made to go to church through advertising as well as they can be made to buy a popular drink. Either advertising pays or preaching does not pay."

Hulbert Responds

Dr. Evenson's address was responded to by Rev. D. W. Hulbert.

"It has been fifteen years since a gathering of this sort was held in La Crosse," he said. Rev. Hulbert complimented the convention on the large number attending the opening session.

Movie travelogues took the place of a program at the beginning of the meeting. On a screen placed just back of the pulpit were shown interesting cinema views of China. The large auditorium was decorated with a number of flags.

Rev. Yard's sermon was the last number on the evening's program. It follows in part:

"There is a different feeling between the pastors of the Baptist churches in Wisconsin than among the pastors of other states," declared Rev. Yard in opening his sermon. "I spent some time in Illinois, and if I should be called upon to speak in such a gathering as this in that state I should flatly refuse. The ministers have a sort of a grand way about them, or they at least think they are grand."

A Big Kingdom

"We are living in the biggest age the world has ever seen. It is an age of big governments and big achievements, but I believe that the biggest thing of all in this age is the kingdom of God. Last year the Baptists alone raised $30,000,000 and the denomination has the sum of $170,000,000 invested throughout the world. Add to this the investments of all other Christian industries in the world and you have a gigantic project. Four hundred thousand people entered the Baptist church other than by letter last year."

"I want to explain what I mean by the kingdom of God. It means the reign of God in the human spirit. It is not limited to geographical boundary lines, but it jumps like electricity to all lands. Many people fall down hard when they think it is not a spiritual kingdom, and they hope that some day it will be a mixture of the spiritual and temporal. There was a time when a man could congregate his family in morning prayers and in the afternoon beat his neighbor in a horse trade and still be called a good member of the kingdom of God."

Church Not Kingdom

"The terms 'Kingdom of God' and 'Church of God' are not synonymous terms. It was a sorry day for the church when the former phrase was changed to the latter. It was changed in the sixteenth century but I believe that the day is coming when the value of it will be rediscovered."

"I am impressed with the kingdom of God as it is today. There are occasionally sermons preached on the second coming of Christ, and men wonder whether they are ready for His coming, when in reality they ought to know more about the first coming of Christ.

Will Religion be Religious?

"I preached a sermon recently which dwelt on whether the Christian religion of the next decade will be a religious religion. Will the people do what religion demands of them? A deacon in my church told me recently of a man who prayed earnestly in the morning and then went from his home to live a deceitful life all day. I would rather see a man go to his daily work without praying and be sincere in everything he does than to be this sort of a man."

"When I was a boy my father sent me to a farmer who was an expert in the raising of short-horn cattle. The man abused everyone about him and did everything he ought not to have done, but when dinner time came he went through a lot of words at the table he might have called praying. It almost made me think that religion was of no worth. A prayerless Christian living is contrary to all Christian principles and it is unbelievable, but men must live as they pray."

"Men must pay as they pray. There is an old man in my church who is decidedly wealthy, and who says he is blessed of God, but when the plate was handed around for missionary contribution, after much thought and speculation, he decided to give five dollars. That man is far from the Christian spirit."

"Men want to be carried to heaven on flowery beds of ease because they were converted away back in their youth and have given a few dollars to the heathen. The kingdom of God will come as we pray and if we act as we pray."

"I do not think that because anyone muttered a few words when they were young that they are saved. We are not saved for heaven but for service in this world.

Autos Eclipse Heaven

"Men expect to go to heaven but heaven does not mean much to them. There are too many automobiles and they are too comfortable to ride in to give up thoughts of leaving this world, but many people think that they have a free ticket for the ride to heaven."

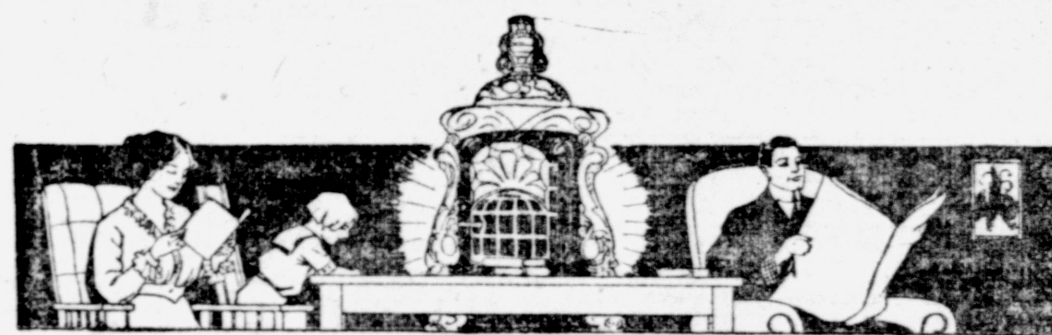

"The belief in a fiery, bottomless pit has been lost. The day has passed when men can be scared into religion. They are rather of the opinion that a new bottom has been put into the pit."

"I have been trying for several years to find a place in the bible where Jesus said, 'follow Me and I will lead you to heaven.' The evangelism of Jesus is the evangelism of the world. There is coming such a movement in the kingdom of God that the world will be rocked."
